The Queen on a Rail.

The Cincinnati Enquirer thinks that the Queen should hereafter slide down stairs on the banisters, and it adds: There is a good chance in London for an Irish informer to make a fat fee. All he has to do is to swear that he saw Parnell greasing the stairs of Windsor Palace with a piece of bacon rind. Of course Parnell would try to prove an alibi, but that would only show the total depravity of the man.

Old Etna is the largest of the European series of volcanoes. Its base is 90 miles in circumference and the cone rises to 11,000 feet. Its first recorded eruption took place in 476 B. C. The second occurred in A. D. 1169, and laid the city of Catania in ashes, slaying 15,000 of its inhabitants. In 1572 another disastrous eruption took place, and from 1661 to 1673 a series of minor ones. From that time until 1852 quiet reigned. Two new craters were then formed in the mountain, and from these issued lava streams, one of them 2 miles broad and 170 feet deep. Clouds of gray ashes covered the whole island of Sicily.

The Desert News, the organ of the Mormons at Salt Lake boldly declares that it is the intention of the church to resist the disfranchisement of polygamists in the courts, and to fight the Edmunds' law at every point. The church leaders are deriving great comfort from the fact that the next House of Representatives will be Democratic. The Republican party has opposed Polgamy as it had opposed slavery, and has demanded its extinction from the country. The Democratic party, on the other hand, has defended both slavery and polygamy, as means to the furtherance of its political ends. It is on this history that the Mormon church builds its hopes for the perpetuation of its beastly systems.

Congressman Reagan of Texas is lying very ill in Washington, and his recovery is doubtful. Mr. Reagan was Postmaster General of the Confederacy, and has been a member of Congress for the past ten years. He is the author of the much discussed "Reagan bill" on fares and freights—the bill which proposes to prevent railroads from charging more for carrying a passenger or a ton of freight 100 miles than they charge for carrying the same 500 miles.

A leading clergyman of Montreal, Canada, is quoted by the Ottawa Free Press as saying is his prayer a few Sundays ago: "Oh Lord, as to our provincial Parliament, I do not know what to ask, but kindly reform it or abolish it altogether." Last week the Parliament house of the Province was burned, and yet there are people who doubt the efficacy of prayer.

Near Sioux City, Iowa, during a thunder storm lately the house of a farmer named Diamond, near Ashbury, was struck by lightning, instantly killing a two-year-old child sleeping between its parents. The father will probably die, but the mother is recovering.

PROBLEMS OF THE TIME.
The Necessity for Giving Greater Attention to Social Questions.
(By Henry George)

I propose in these articles to discuss some problems of the time. Space so limited forbids exhaustive treatment; but I may excite thought even if I cannot develop theories.

There come moments in our lives that summon all our powers—when we feel that, casting away illusions, we must decide and act with our utmost intelligence and energy. So in national life come periods specially calling for earnestness and intelligence.

We seem to have entered one of these periods. Over and again have nations and civilizations been confronted with problems, which, like the riddles of the Sphinx, not to answer was to be destroyed; but never before have problems so vast and intricate been presented. This is not strange. That the closing years of this century must bring up momentous social questions follows from the material and intellectual progress that has marked its course.

Between the development of society and the development of species there is a close analogy. In the lowest forms of animal life there is little difference of parts; both wants and powers are few and simple; movement seems automatic; and instincts are scarcely distinguishable from those of the vegetable. So homogeneous are some of these living things, that if cut in pieces, each piece will live. But as life rises into higher manifestations, simplicity gives way to complexity. The parts develop into organs having separate functions and reciprocal relations; new wants and powers arise, and a greater and greater degree of intelligence is needed to secure food and avoid danger. Did fish, bird or beast possess no higher intelligence than the polyp. Nature could bring them forth only to die.

This law that the increasing complexity and delicacy of organization which gives higher capacity and increased power, is accompanied by increased wants and dangers, and requires, therefore, increased intelligence—runs through nature. In the ascending scale of life at last comes man, the most highly and delicately organized of animals. Yet not only do his higher powers require for their use a higher intelligence than exists in other animals, but without higher intelligence he could not live. His skin is too thin; his nails too brittle; he is too poorly adapted for running, climbing, swimming or burrowing. Were he not gifted with intelligence greater than that of any beast, he would perish from cold, starve from inability to get food, or be exterminated by animals better equipped for the struggle in which brute instinct suffices.

In man, however, the intelligence which increases all through nature's rising scale passes at one bound into an intelligence so superior, that the difference seems of kind rather than degree. In him, that narrow and seemingly unconscious intelligence that we call instinct becomes conscious reason, and the godlike power of adaptation and invention makes feeble man nature's king.

But with man the ascending line stops. Animal life assumes no higher form, nor can we affirm that in all generations man, as an animal, has a whit improved. But progression in another line begins. Where the development of species ends, social development commences; and that advance of society that we call civilization so increases human powers, that between savage and civilized man there is a gulf so vast as to suggest the gulf between the highly organized animal and the oyster glued to the rocks. And with every advance upon this line, new vistas open. When we try to think what knowledge and power progressive civilization may give to the man of the future, imagination fails.

In this progression which begins with man, as in that which leads up to him, the same law holds. Each advance makes a demand for higher and higher intelligence. With the beginnings of society arises the need for social intelligence—for that consensus of individual intelligence which forms a public opinion, a public conscience, a public will, and is manifested in law, institutions, and administration. As society develops, a higher and higher degree of this social intelligence is required, for the relation of individuals to each other becomes more intimate and important, and the increasing complexity of the social organization brings liability to new dangers.

In the rude beginning each family produces its own food, makes its own clothes, builds its own house, and when it moves, furnishes its own transportation. Compare with this independence the intricate dependence of the denizens of a modern city. They may supply themselves with greater certainty, and in much greater variety and abundance than the savage; but it is by the co-operation of thousands. Even the water they drink, and the artificial light they use, are brought to them by elaborate machinery, requiring the constant watchfulness of many men. They may travel at a speed incredible to the savage; but in doing so resign life and limb to the care of others. A broken rail, a drunken engineer, a careless switchman, may hurl them to eternity and the power of applying labor to the satisfaction of desire passes, in the same way, beyond the direct control of the individual. The laborer becomes but part of a great machine, which may at any time be paralyzed by causes beyond his power or even his foresight. Thus does the well-being of each become more and more dependent upon the well-being of all—the individual more and more subordinate to society. And so come new dangers. The rude society resembles the creature that though cut into pieces will live; the highly civilized society is like a highly organized animal; a stab in a vital part, the suppression of a single function, is death. A savage village may be burned and its people driven off—but, used to direct recourse to nature, they can maintain themselves. Highly civilized man, however, accustomed to capital, to machinery, to the minute division of labor, becomes helpless when suddenly deprived of these and thrown upon nature. Under the factory system some sixty persons, with the aid of much costly machinery, co-operate to the making of a pair of shoes. But, of the sixty, not one could make a whole shoe. This is the tendency in all branches of production, even in agriculture. How many farmers of the new generation can use the scythe? How many farmers' wives can now make a coat from the wool? Many of our farmers do not even make their own butter or raise their own vegetables!

It is startling to think how destructive in a civilization like ours would be such fierce conflicts as fill the history of the past. The wars of highly civilized countries, since the opening of the era of steam and machinery, have been duels of armies rather than conflicts of peoples or classes. Our only glimpse of what might happen, were passion fully aroused, was in the struggle of the Paris Commune. And, since 1870, to the knowledge of petroleum has been added that of even more destructive agents. The explosion of a little nitroglycerine, under a few water-mains, would make a great city uninhabitable; the blowing up of a few railroad bridges and tunnels would bring famine quicker than the wall of circumvallation that Titus drew around Jerusalem; the pumping of atmospheric air into the gas-mains, and the application of a match, would tear up every street and level every house. The Thirty Years' War set back civilization in Germany; so fierce a war now would all but destroy it. Not merely have destructive powers vastly increased, but the whole social organization has become vastly more delicate.

In a simpler state man and man, neighbor and neighbor, know each other, and there is that touch of the elbow which, in times of danger, enables society to rally. But present tendencies are to the loss of this. In a London, dwellers in one house do not know those in the next; the tenants of adjoining rooms are utter strangers to each other. Let civil conflict break or paralyze the authority that preserves order and the vast population would become a terror-stricken mob, without point of rally or principle of cohesion, and your London would be sacked and burned by an army of thieves.

London is only the greatest of great cities. What is true of London is true of New York, and in the same measure true of the many cities whose hundreds of thousands are steadily growing toward millions. These vast aggregations of humanity, where he who seeks isolation may find it more true than in the desert; where wealth and poverty touch and jostle; where one revels and another starves within a few feet of each other, yet separated by as great a gulf as that that divided Dives in Hell and Lazarus in Abraham's bosom—they are centres and types of our civilization. Let far or shock dislocate the complex and delicate organization, let the policeman's club be thrown down or wrested from him, and the fountains of the great deep are opened, and quicker than ever before chaos comes again. Strong as it may seem, our civilization is evolving destructive forces. Not desert and forest, but city slums and country road-sides are nursing the barbarians who may be to the new what Hun and Vandal were to the old.

Nor should we forget that in civilized man still lurks the savage. The men who, in past times, oppressed or revolted, who fought to the death in petty quarrels and drank fury with blood, who burnt cities and rent empires, were men essentially such as those we daily meet. Social progress has accumulated knowledge, softened manners, refined tastes and extended sympathies, but man is yet capable of as blind a rage as, when clothed in skins, he fought wild beasts with a flint. And present tendencies, in some respects at least, threaten to kindle passions that have so often before flamed in destructive fury. There is in all the past nothing to compare with the rapid changes now going on in the civilized world. It seems as though in the European race, and in the nineteenth century, man was just beginning to live—just grasping his own and becoming conscious of his powers. The snail's pace of crawling ages has suddenly become the headlong run or the locomotive, speeding faster and faster. This rapid progress is primarily in industrial methods and material powers. But industrial changes imply social changes and necessitate political changes. Progressive societies outgrow institutions as children outgrow clothes. Social progress always demands greater intelligence in the management of public affairs; but thus the more as progress is rapid and change quicker.

And that the rapid changes now going on are bringing up problems that demand most earnest attention may be seen on every hand. Symptoms of danger, premonitions of violence, are appearing all over the civilized world. Creeds are dying, beliefs are changing; the old forces of conservatism are melting away. Political institutions are failing, as clearly in democratic America as in monarchical Europe. There is growing unrest and bitterness among the masses, whatever be the form of government. To attribute all this to the teachings of demagogues, is like attributing the fever to the quickened pulse. It is the new wine beginning to ferment in old bottles. To put into a sailing ship the powerful engines of a first-class ocean steamer, would be to tear her to pieces with their play. So the new powers rapidly changing all the relations of society must shatter social and political organizations not adapted to meet their strain.

To adjust our institutions to growing needs and changing conditions is the task which devolves upon us. Prudence, patriotism, human sympathy and religious sentiment, alike call upon us to undertake it. There is danger in rock-less change; but greater danger in blind conservatism. The problems beginning to confront us are grave—so grave that there is fear they may not be solved in time to prevent great catastrophes. But their gravity comes from indisposition to frankly grapple with them.

A civilization which tends to concentrate wealth and power in the hands of a fortunate few, and to make of others mere human machines, must evolve anarchy and bring destruction. But a civilization is possible in which the poorest could have all the comforts and conveniences now enjoyed by the rich; in which prisons and almshouses would be needless and charitable societies unthought of. Such a civilization only waits for the social intelligence that will adapt means to ends. Powers that might give plenty to all are already in our hands. Though there is poverty and want, there is, yet, seeming embarrassment from the very excess of wealth-producing forces. "Give us but a market," say manufacturers, "and we will supply goods to no end!" "Give us but work!" cry idle men!

The evils that begin to appear spring from the fact that the application of intelligence to social affairs has not kept pace with the application of intelligence to individual needs and material ends. Knowledge has vastly increased; industry and commerce have been revolutionized; but whether free trade or protection is best for a nation is yet an open question. We have brought machinery to a pitch of perfection that, fifty years ago, could not have been imagined; but, in the presence of political corruption, we seem as helpless as idiots. The East River Bridge is a crowning triumph of mechanical skill; but to get it built a leading citizen of Brooklyn had to carry to New York sixty thousand dollars in a carpet-bag to bribe New York Aldermen. The human soul that thought out the great bridge is imprisoned in a crazed and broken body, and can only watch it grow by peering through a telescope out of the window of the chamber where he lies bed-fast. Nevertheless the weight of the immense mass is estimated and adjusted for every inch. But the skill of the engineer could not prevent condemned wire being smuggled into the cable.

The progress of civilization requires that more and more intelligence be devoted to social affairs, and this not the intelligence of the few, but that of the many. We cannot safely leave politics to politicians, or political economy to college professors. The people themselves must think, because the people alone can act.

In a "Journal of civilization" a professed teacher declares the saving word for society to be that each shall mind his own business. This is the gospel of selfishness, soothing as soft flutes to those, who, having fared well themselves, think everybody should be satisfied. But the salvation of society, the hope for the free, full development of humanity, is in the gospel of brotherhood—the gospel of Christ. The law of social progress makes the well-being of all more and more the business of each; it binds all closer and closer together in bonds from which none can escape. He who observes the law—and the properties, and cares for his family, yet takes no interest in the general weal, and gives no thought to those who are trodden under foot, saved now and then to bestow alms, is not a true Christian. Nor is he a good citizen. The duty of the citizen is more and harder than this.

The intelligence required for the solving of social problems is not a mere thing of the intellect. It must be animated with the religious sentiment and warm with sympathy for human suffering. It must stretch out beyond self-interest, whether it be the self-interest of the few or the many. It must seek justice. For at the bottom of every social problem we will find a social wrong.

TOWN AND COUNTY.

BREVITIES.

John Hoppin, a large cattle man of Humboldt county, passed below last evening ahead of one of his large shipments of beef cattle.

The cases of the State of Nevada vs. L. L. Crockett and J. H. Kinkaid, known as the Savings Bank cases has been postponed until May 24th.

John Richardson of the Capital Saloon is keeping up with the demands of the times by spreading a free lunch every day for his patrons. To-day is bean day.

Hill, the brakeman who was arrested at Winnemucca for stowing away two men in an oyster car, plead guilty, and was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail.

The Central Pacific Railroad Company has issued a circular to the effect that tickets will be placed on sale July 15th for the accommodation of the Knight Templars and their lady relatives.

Martin & Augustine, successors to the late firm of Berry & Boyd, received yesterday from the North a double-decked prairie schooner load of Honey Lake flour, which filled all of the vacant room of their capacious cellar.

Judge Webster informs us that there has already been, since day before yesterday, thirty-five applications made to him for the position of conductor on the N. & O. railroad, as soon as it is again started up by the leasers, of which he is one. No one has yet applied for the position of General Superintendent or Treasurer of the company, at which lack of interest taken in the new enterprise he feels much surprised and mortified.

Richards Convicted of Murder.
Stephen Richards has been convicted of murder in the first degree, at Auburn, Cal., for the killing of Thomas Nichols, on the 11th of March last. The night previous to the murder, Richards had been gambling, and, according to his own story, had lost some $12 or $14. He became intoxicated and claimed to have been robbed in the game. Meeting Nichols in the doorway of the hotel he charged him with having been in the game, and demanded the return of his money. Nichols, who had never seen Richards before, remonstrated with him, when the latter, without warning, drew a revolver and shot Nichols dead. The murderer has a bad record, having been sentenced to life imprisonment in the State of Nevada for killing a man in Austin. He was pardoned out, however, for services rendered during the burning of the prison at Carson a few years ago.

The Storm.
The storm which was central in Colorado has remained stationary and is now central in West Nebraska. The winds have shifted to the northerly, with colder weather at the Rocky Mountain stations. Heavy snow is reported at Cheyenne. At Reno it has been quite chilly and cloudy, with an occasional slight fall of sleet from the north-east. The Indian barometer, the horned toad, has kept well under cover, with only an occasional peep of his head above the sand. Yesterday he uncovered his back for a while, and Johnson Sides, the Piute oracle, says: "Fine weather come byn-by. I heap sabo toad."

Give it Attention.
The officers have made 37 arrests this month and have convicted all but three cases. The arrested parties nearly all traced their troubles, directly or indirectly to Douglas avenue. That notorious thoroughfare breeds more trouble and is the source of more fights, robberies and petty larceny offenses than all the rest of the town combined, and needs strict attention from the officers night and day. Several of the houses are filled with drunken, worthless men and women who commit crime and defy the law by swearing themselves clear when "taken in." The Commissioners should look into that locality and devise some means of suppressing the nuisance.

Amusements.
In Bodie the boys put in time trying to win an egg stake; in Coryville they get their dogs out and chase porcupines; in Virginia they tear down houses for Hawthorne; in Cat Creek they catch coyotes; in Lundy they kick for a pay day; in Carson they invoke the spirits of the dead departed; in Tuscarora they discuss the late strike; in Hawthorne they race mules, and in Reno they buck at the tiger and discuss the question of "Who is to be the next Superintendent of the Insane Asylum."

A splendid stock of fresh garden, field and flower seeds just received at Osburn & Shoemaker's.

Gone From Our Gaze.

A few days ago, while Constable Nash was searching the domicile of Agnes Miller, on Lincoln Avenue, for the money recently lost by Scott, the discharged soldier, while visiting her, he unearthed a gold watch lost by a Frenchman there about a month ago. Miss Agnes, at the time, strenuously denied, with tears in her eyes, all knowledge of the whereabouts of the watch and positively knew it was not lost at her house. A search at the time for it failed to discover it. But while searching for the money the officer noticed a tin yeast powder can under the house and upon opening it the missing watch was found inside. A charge of petit larceny was made against her, the watch being valued at $40. Upon her being brought into Court, the Justice's heart became melted with sympathy by her tears and vehement declarations of innocence, and her occupations of persecution by the unfeeling minions of the law, and he gave her a day to plead to the charge and allowed her to go on her own recognizance upon her "word of honor" to appear the next morning at 10 o'clock to answer to the charge. At the hour named she failed to appear before the Court. The Constable went in quest of the delinquent, but the bird had flown. He found that she with one or two male companions had left on the morning train for Carson, Virginia, Hawthorne, Bodie or some other new field and pasture green. The officers now feel very much depressed in spirit over the result of their unrequited confidence and sympathy, and no "word of honor" goes with them hereafter. However, it has probably been the means of breaking up one of the worst, if not the worst nest of crime, and criminal rendezvous in the town of Reno.

Overflooded.
The town of Reno has for a month past been overflooded with gangs of the worst classes of tramps, thieves and ex-convicts; so much so that there has been considerable talk of reviving the tar-bucket brigade. Constable Nash and his deputies are doing all in their power, night and day, to thin them out, and, with the assistance of Justice Young, they are succeeding admirably. There have been upwards of forty arrests made so far this month; and all have been convicted, with the exception of three—arrested for stealing $250 from the soldier, Scott; and some of them have left the place. Some of those convicted of vagrancy were given an opportunity to skip the town before sentence, which advantage they generally took. Justice Young and the Commissioners thinking this to be the better method than to crowd the jail and feed, at the county's expense, this class of bums, beggars and unconvicted thieves. But, still, there is growing among our citizens about many who are still here, and unless they can make their exit there is no telling what may transpire some of these dark nights. There is no use of publishing names; but a hint to the wise is sufficient.

Look Out.
A fraud named Lowrie, a confidence man, has been working Humboldt county, and now is working his way towards Reno. We warn our readers to look out for him. After doing Winnemucca in fine style, he went to Mill City, where he represented himself as being the agent of capitalists who wanted to invest in mines. While there he was taken to Star Mining District, where he was shown some mines, with the appearance of which he seemed to be well pleased. He agreed to purchase one of the mines for $10,000, but as remittances, which he pretended to be expecting daily, did not arrive, he borrowed all the money that he could get, ran in debt for his board and whisky, and has left for fresh fields and pastures new. He probably is now in Wadsworth or some wayside town. Look out for him. He will probably have an alias when he arrives in Reno.

Thousands of women bless the day on which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" was made known to them. In all those derangements causing headache, dragging-down sensations, nervous and general debility, it is a sovereign remedy. Its soothing and healing properties render it of the utmost value to ladies suffering from "internal fever," congestion, inflammation or ulceration. By druggists.

Mac, Bonifant, a prominent lawyer of Winnemucca, has gone down to El Paso, Texas, near the corner of Texas, New Mexico and Old Mexico to take a look at the country with a view of locating there. Several Renosites are preparing to leave for the same country.

The best known remedy for coughs and colds is the Infalible Cough Mixture prepared by Osburn & Shoemaker.

General Crook means business with the marauding Apaches. He has been so successful previously as an Indian fighter, that the strongest hopes exist that he will soon make the whole of Arizona and New Mexico as safe a place of residence as California.

Low heeled shoes are de rigueur for small children.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. feb. 21-sw-1yr.

Bliss' American Wonder peas, Chicago market potatoes, red, white and yellow top and bottom onion sets, Arabian everygreen millet seed, white Russian oats and a full line of fresh field, flower and vegetable seeds are selling rapidly at Queen's drug store, at bottom prices.

You can buy a first-class sewing machine twenty-five per cent. cheaper at Osburn & Shoemaker's than elsewhere in the State.
